good day on that road to kill railroad men The Texas East Line narrow-gauge railroad ompany has let the contract for extending heir road from Sulphur Springs to Farmerville, forty eight miles. The road is to cross the Texas Central at M'Kinney, and then run west to Decatur, Wise county. Captain W.S. Houdlette, a citizen of Little Rock and prominent among the officers of the Little Rock and Napoleon railroad com-pany, has been in Memphis during the past formation as to the status of the matters at issue between his corporation and the one at resent operating the Little Rock, Mississippi River and Texas railroad. Captain H., in giving a short synopsis of the causes which led to the present litigation, said that the Little Rock and Napoleon company was or-ganized early in the lifties, and chartered by the general assembly of Arkansas, without limitation as to time, and also without any guarantee or expectation of State aid; that about two hundred thousand dollars in money and labor was paid up; that the right of way from Napoleon to Pine Bluff had been cleared of timber, and a large amount of grading, bridging and trestling done. The reak of the war put a stop to the work, and when the trouble was over, the origina stockholders, in common with the majority of southern men, found themselves unable to proceed with the enterprise, and nothing was done by anyone until reconstruction had been accomplished in Arkansas. Then a company was formed by outsiders, under the lead of one Lewis, and, by virtue of the general incorporation law passed by a reconstructive legislature, took possession of the rights and franchises of the old company, without offering any compensation therefor, or for the labor already performed. Large grants of lands were obtained from the State, and the The City of Helena passed up on time yesterday evening for St. Louis. She added here 440 bales eastern-bound cotton.

The Mark Twain, Captain W. P. Hale, it the packet to-day at twelve o'clock for Dyers ounties through which the line passed voted beral subscriptions to secure completion of the road, which at this late day is unfinished. Captain Houdlette says the suit now in progrees is to recover and take possission of what justly belongs to the old company, and be seems sanguine of success, in which event the road will be restored to the old line between Varner and Arkansas City, which was abandoned by the company at present operating the road nearly or quite a year ago. He also says that the work between Little Rock and Pine Bluff is not being pushed with the energy necessary to an early the objective points.
